Sir / Madam,

I think it of the greatest importance that doctors in Ontario retain their undoubted moral and legal right to refuse to engage in medical practices unacceptable to them by reason of their ethical and religious views.

Specifically doctors should not be compelled to perform or collude in the performance of abortions or the prescription of contraceptive drugs or devices.

That your college is considering to constrain doctors to act against their conscience in such debatable and controversial matters as these indicates how far you have strayed both from the principles of your profession and the strictures of right reason and informed opinion.
